READING FOR WINTER

PUBLIC LIBRARIAN NOTES A DECIDED INCREASE IN DEMAND FOR BOOKS

One of the sure signs that winter is approaching and that the vacation season is over is the increased attendance at the public library reading room and the growing demand for books. The moment the schools open there is a rush to get books bearing on the subjects that are being studied in schools. Here is a wide field for teachers who know something outside the routine of textbooks. The influence of a school teacher on his or her pupils can be vastly increased when that teacher is well read in the literature that illuminates the subject being studied.

Nothing, for example is more dry than the ordinary school history, yet those dry bones can be clothed upon and made fair and beautiful and live again when they are supplemented with the works of historical writers or historical novels. For instance, should the name of Erasmus occur in a text-book, it would likely be passed over without comment if the teacher did not know the wonderful works of that great genius as contained in his descriptions of travel in Europe in his own age; if they did not know that he was the author of the first Greek text from which the Scriptures were translated into English, or had never read the wonderful story of his father and mother as set forth in that charming novel, "The Cloister and the Hearth."

Higher mathematics is not by any means a subject that appeals to any except the few who have need of it in their professions or who study it as part of their mental training; yet the direction of the youthful mind toward the amusing disquisitions of Urquhart or the clever book on "Quaternions" by Prof. Crystal, which reads almost like a romance, might go far to reconcile an objecting mind to that study. A Scotch professor once set the first six books of Euclid to rhyme, and in this way had a record for training first-class mathematicians that was remarkable.

"There is no subject that is made a matter of study," said Mrs. Danford, the accomplished librarian of Glendale, "that is not related to some other subject, and one of the great issues of a public library is to aid students in getting this supplementary knowledge, which is often much greater than the substructure on which it is built. No student can hope to come near anything like a complete knowledge of any subject until he or she has read all the books that have been written around it. By reading of this kind one gets an enlarged view and a variety of views that gradually open the mind and make it realize the paucity of human knowledge.

"This winter I hope to find an increased number of both students and general readers making use of the library. I desire to extend through the columns of the Glendale Evening News a cordial invitation to the ladies of the clubs to make use of what assistance I can give them in indicating sources of reading on the subjects they will be handling this winter. I also extend a cordial invitation to the children of the schools to make use of the assistance we can afford them in using the library.

"The Union High school has furnished us with a list of books that will be used as references in connection with their studies this season. Some of these books we have in the library already; some of them we will order or have already ordered. We are also looking up the books that are set forth in the program of the literary section of the Tuesday Afternoon club, and such of them as we have not got already will be supplied, so that the ladies can have opportunity to study beforehand the subjects to be discussed.

"I notice a decided increase in readers in the library. In the winter season people are more inclined to read than during vacation times; but apart from that, I think that there is a marked increase in readers in Glendale. The library has been attracting more attention of late on account of the vacation talks given to the children on Wednesdays. Those lectures have interested the parents of the children and their friends, and I anticipate a very busy season at the library this winter. All will be welcomed and made welcome, and both myself and my assistants will give our visitors any aid they may need."

RICHES OF MID-STATES

M. B. HARTMANN TELLS OF THE GROWTH OF ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS

Whatever may be thought of conditions on the Pacific coast, according to M. B. Hartmann, 210 Dayton court, the Middle West is a "land flowing with milk and honey." There the crops are so abundant and the farmers so properous that the wealth has reacted on the country and city alike and lifted up the two cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis to a stage of civic advance such as can scarcely be understood except by those who have known those centers in the days of their early rivalry.

"Leaving Glendale on June 15," said Mr. Hartmann, "I and Mrs. Hartmann journeyed back to the scene of our former labors. We have been going back to St. Paul and Minneapolis every year for a brief summer stay since settling in Glendale. In the summer time those cities are blessed with a very fine climate, but we prefer the winter in Glendale to the Minnesota style, where the thermometer sometimes goes down to 40 degrees below zero.

"We found that the season this year had been cold and rainy. In some places through which we passed there was quite a deal of water on the ground. When we went across to St. Paul in June we also found that the corn crop had been destroyed by a severe frost and that a new crop had been planted in its stead. When we returned, as we did, to Glendale on Sept. 16, we saw the second crop standing about seven or eight feet high and giving promise of an abundant yield.

"With every other crop there was evidence of a most plentiful yield—oats, barley, wheat, rye, were all in excellent condition. There was a bumper crop of everything and great gain to the farmer. Such conditions have prevailed there for several years and the consequence has been that much wealth has poured into the cities. Every farmer has his auto, many of them several. Their fields are vast in extent and the most modern machinery is in use. This has resulted in great care in cultivation. The fields are beautifully fenced in, hedges clipped and trimmed until one would think one were walking through a rich man's domain.

"All this advance is naturally reflected in the cities. St. Paul and Minneapolis have grown so greatly that they are now almost one city. By and by I do not doubt they will be living together in unison and union. Indeed there are few traces left of the old rivalry. The people of the Twin Cities realize that their destiny is inextricably joined and that the future must be faced and conquered in company.

"When I was a former citizen of St. Paul I used to take great interest in the development of parks and boulevards, and was on the civic committee that looked after such matters. I took a great interest in the city beautiful and always participated in flower shows and horticultural societies. I take a similar interest in Glendale, and wish to devote some part of my knowledge gained elsewhere to the benefit of the city in which I live.

"There are many new buildings going up both in St. Paul and in Minneapolis. The cities are growing at a marvelous rate. Those large and handsome office buildings are a criterion of wealth. St. Paul, for instance, is putting up a public library at a cost of $1,500,000. It is a large handsome building and will be a great credit to the city. There are also other buildings that occupy whole blocks.

"I am glad to be able to tell of this growth and prosperity, for what is taking place in any single center of the country must extend its influence to all other sections. The country is slowly improving and what is being gained now, I am confident, is permanent and will not be taken away from us. I hope to witness a similar growth and distribution of wealth on the Pacific coast."

ONE AMERICAN SOLDIER AND THREE MEXICANS ARE KILLED NEAR BROWNSVILLE, TEXAS

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Sept. 24.—One American soldier was killed and two wounded today when a large body of Mexicans surrounded a small detachment of American troopers near this city. American reinforcements arrived in time to rescue their comrades. Three Mexicans were killed and five wounded.

Later reports from Progreso, the village near to which the fight took place, state that 30 Mexicans attacked ten Americans. The Americans, troopers belonging to the regular border guard, were sleeping in a secluded gully. When the first volley came scattering into the sleeping camp the American soldiers, started up, abandoned their rifles and fled, leaving one of their number dead behind. The Mexicans, after taking possession of the rifles and the rest of the camp equipment, effected their own escape.

PEST TURNED INTO BOON

"BITTER CLOVER," DESPISED AS ENEMY OF FARMERS, NOW FOUND GREAT HELP

Like the ugly duckling in the story which turned out to be a swan, "bitter clover," a despised pest of the grain fields, has now been discovered by the University of California to be an invaluable ally of the farmer, capable of increasing the yield of his land by two-thirds.

Bitter clover is a yellow flowering annual which grows wild in Arizona and California, and is known also as "yellow-top," "sour clover," "sweet clover," or "Melilotus Indica." It has now been proved that if grown to the age of about six months as a "cover crop" and then plowed under, it will increase by two-thirds the yield of certain other crops planted in succession to it, so greatly does it enrich the soil with nitrogen and humus.

The story of how this unappreciated native "weed" has been found to increase the yield of subsequent crops following its incorporation into the soil to a greater extent than any other legume ever tested in California is told by W. M. Mertz, superintendent of cultivations of the citrus experiment station of the University of California at Riverside, Cal., in a circular on "Melilotus Indica as a Green Manure Crop in Southern California," just published by the University of California and obtainable free by writing to the College of Agriculture at the university.

Here is related the story of how for many years past the University of California has been testing a wide variety of "cover crops" at Riverside and elsewhere. Various clovers, vetches and other legumes, as well as rye, barley, etc., have been grown as a winter cover crop and then plowed under in the spring, in order by "green manuring" to introduce nitrogen into the soil, aid the activity of useful soil bacteria, and improve the texture, humus content and general condition of the soil. Then potatoes, corn, sugar beets and other crops have been grown on the test plots to find out how much the fertility of the soil has been improved by this treatment.

The resulting increase of fertility has been most gratifying. Land on which common vetch had been plowed under gave an increased yield of 28.7 per cent, burr clover, 30.4, and Canadian peas 43.4 per cent.

But when "bitter clover" was grown and plowed under, the yield of the test crops following showed an actual average increase of 64.8 per cent.

This is nearly half as great again an increase of yield as it has been possible to obtain by plowing under cover crops of rye or barley and applying also 1092 pounds of nitrate of soda or 1188 pounds of dried blood per acre.

Bitter clover, moreover, is practically immune to injury by that common insect pest, the aphis, and it will stand more frost than either vetch or peas.

For use in a citrus orchard, bitter clover should be planted not later than October 15 in order to make a large growth and be ready to plow under by March. In walnut orchards, however, and in other irrigated deciduous orchards where late spring plowing is possible without injury, bitter clover may be planted as a cover crop as late as Dec. 15.

It is an interesting example of how science nowadays makes profitable use of what once was regarded as refuse and waste that the seed of bitter clover is now largely a by-product, being separated from the screenings of wheat, in which it is often a prevalent weed. The cost of the 25 pounds of good recleaned seed per acre needed to plant bitter clover is less than that of the 75 pounds of common vetch seed or 100 pounds of Canadian pea seed needed to plant these two other cover crops, heretofore the most popular.

Another remarkable merit of this new cover crop, "bitter clover," is that it is extremely effective in preventing "plow-sole," or irrigation hardpan, an ailment to which a large proportion of irrigated orchard soils in California are liable. Frequent cultivations of dry pulverized soils, together with frequent irrigation, tend to wash down the fine clay particles and deposit them in a dense, hard layer of varying thickness just under the cultivated area, and thus soils become impervious to water. "Bitter clover," however, though an annual plant, in six months sends its roots deep down, often as much as eight feet. This great root system is extremely useful to the orchardist, keeping the deep layers of the soil in good physical condition and opened up for irrigation.

NEW MUSIC METHOD

MISS INA WHITTAKER BRINGS LATEST EUROPEAN TEACHING TO GLENDALE

After three years spent in Germany and England under first-class instructors, Miss Ina Whittaker, who before leaving for Europe was well known as a musical instructor of great merit in Glendale, has returned to take up her former work. Miss Whittaker will have a studio for pupils in her residence here, 208 West Ninth street, and also a studio in 335 Blanchard building.

Miss Whittaker was in London during the war time, but her study flowed on there uninterrupted by any extraneous troubles. In Berlin she studied in one of the great conservatories which have justly achieved world-wide fame. Her teacher was Martin Krause, the genius who taught piano technique to the well-known Los Angeles piano master, Thilo Becker.

In London Miss Whittaker studied at the world-known Royal Academy of Music, in Baker street. That institution has earned for itself a reputation second to none for teaching methods. Tobias Mathay and Oscar Berringer are the heads of the institution. Mathay has developed what is known to musicians everywhere as the Mathay method. He has classified, analyzed and systematized all that is good in every known piano method. Mathay made special and close study of all the great players and composers, and his method is the latest thing in piano teaching. The advantage of studying abroad is that one gets a broader view of what is going on in the world of music than if one stayed in one place.

"What I have learned in the three years I have been in Europe," says Miss Whittaker, "I can communicate to my pupils and put them in touch with the latest and best teaching of the world. I hope to find a large clientele in Glendale and Los Angeles, and anticipate a prosperous season."

FUNERAL OF MRS. BLANCHARD

Funeral services for Mrs. Lucy S. Blanchard, late state president of the Southern California W. C. T. U., will be held Saturday, Sept. 25, at half past 2 o'clock at the First Methodist church, corner of Sixth and Hill streets, Los Angeles. Glendale members attending are requested to be at the church promptly at 2 o'clock, to be seated in a body with members of other unions.

Dr. Locke, pastor of the church, will officiate, assisted by the state officers of the W. C. T. U. The Los Angeles First Union, of which Mrs. Blanchard served as president for 22 years, and having some 600 members, will act as pall bearers.

PULLING TOGETHER

Who is there who has not noticed a team of horses pulling a heavy load, and at the time of starting the loaded wagon to move how necessary it was for the horses to pull together? If perchance on account of the inexperience of the horses or on account of the fault of the driver, one horse would dash forward and attempt to pull the load before the other horse tightened up his traces, no headway was made. The horse that made the unsuccessful effort became discouraged and would not try again.

The same is true with a people of a community, who are expected to pull all the local improvement burdens, keep up good schools, good roads, good fire fighting equipment, protection against loss by floods—they must pull together. They must all start pulling at once, and then pull the load steadily, without jerking and pulling sideways, or pulling against the way to better conditions. It is not always the slow horse that is to blame when a heavy load cannot be moved. The blame often rests on the horse that dashes ahead before the other horse is ready to start. So it may be in civic affairs; a few people may do too much dashing and fail to give cool-headed citizens a chance to make a start.

FIGHT TO LIBERALIZE RUSSIA

None are so fatuous as those who will not be advised. The handwriting is on the wall which condemns the Russian bureaucracy; yet the bureaucrats who have starved the country in every way and who even now refuse to listen to the voices that warn them that things have passed the critical point and have now reached the danger point are urging repressive measures on the czar and the fight against these measures has begun. It is going to be a strenuous fight and is as likely as not to end in the triumph of the people.

Premier Goremykin is one of the traditional ministers of Russia. He believes in autocracy and not in democracy. He may, now and then, have been compelled to conform in certain respects to the will of the people; but if given his own way would shoot them down with as little compunction as they were shot down some years ago when bringing a respectful petition to the czar. The consequence of this has been that instead of yielding to the reform suggestions of the douma, Goremykin set off to find the czar on the battlefield and to set that weak-minded ruler against all ideas of reform.

Nicholas is completely at the mercy of his counsellors and has to accept what they tell him and do what they tell him for want of better counsel. So the prime minister returned to Petrograd from the czar's field headquarters, where he had given him his own version of what the douma's reform measures would mean and announced that the government would not entertain the proposals of the country's representatives because it considered them untimely.

When Goremykin spoke of "the government" he must have laughed internally as the government is simply the bureaucracy. When something is wanted out of the czar then the czar is called the government; but for all intents and purposes the czar has very little to do with governing the country. Probably in this case the czar's own inclinations place him on the side of the bureaucracy. Czar Nicholas may be "Little Father" to the people, who still retain for the person of the ruler a deep affection and a still deeper veneration for him as the head of the church; but the fatherly instincts of Nicholas are all built on the Jewish Solomon's dictum, "He that spareth the rod hateth the child."

So the miserable Russian moujik may ask bread of the czar and all that he is likely to get is a stone. There is one hope, at present, for the Russian people and that is that the Germans may continue their victorious advance into Russia. Then the czar's advisers will ask him to play to the gallery a little more and promise the people some measures of reform.

It is just possible that Nicholas is beginning to be aware of how much the defeat of the Russians by the Germans is due to the shortcomings of the bureaucracy; but it is equally possible that he may take matters into his own hands and while adhering to the Romanoff theory of government, by which the people are ignored, may assert his own autocratic will and bid reform get into the background.

Should Nicholas assert his own power and give the people a taste of autocracy instead of bureaucracy it is likely enough that the bureaucrat will acquiesce in the program; allow the czar to throw dust in the eyes of the people and thus check their efforts after reform. The people are even now praising and thanking God for having given them such a czar and they may continue to think after that manner as long as the Russian resistance continues to be effective; but the moment the Germans are able to continue their advance the liberals will come to the front and real reforms will be extorted from an unwilling czar and an unwilling company of bureaucrats. Should the Germans ever seriously threaten Petrograd the Russian peasant may expect to see the democratization of Russia begin.

TRUE KEY TO PROPHECY

REV. JOHN TROY SAYS THE JEWS ARE KEEPERS OF THE ORACLES OF GOD

The last lecture of the eschatological series delivered by the Rev. John Troy at the First Baptist church will be given tonight, Friday, Sept. 24. The series of lectures has been well attended and has attracted quite a number of strangers to the Bible class. Speaking Thursday night on "Israel the Key to Prophecy," the lecturer said:

Rev. J. H. Troy

"The Bible recognizes three great divisions of mankind, namely, Israel, the Gentiles, and the church of God. (1 Cor. 10:32.)

"By far the major portion of the 66 books of the divine library concern the seed of Abraham. The Bible is a Jew book. All of its writers are Israelites. To the seed of Abraham hath been revealed and intrusted the oracles of God.

"In the initial stage of God's dealings with Abram it was declared that through his seed all the families of the earth should be blessed and that the cursing and blessing of the Gentile nations should be determined by their treatment of God's chosen people. (Gen. 12:1-3.)

The aged Jacob in his dying breath prophesied that "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor the ruler's staff from between his feet until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the obedience of the peoples be." (Gen. 49:10.)

"The prophet Balaam was forced to proclaim concerning the coming one of Israel, 'There shall come forth a star out of Jacob, and a scepter shall rise out of Israel.' (Num. 24:17.)

"Isaiah paints in royal colors the destiny of Israel: 'And it shall come to pass in the latter days that the mountain of Jehovah's house shall be established on the top of the mountains (nations), and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow into it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of Jehovah, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of Jehovah from Jerusalem. And he will judge between the nations, and will decide concerning many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.' (Isa. 2:1-4.)

"Amos tells of the complete final restoration of Israel. (Amos 9:11-15.) James quotes Amos: 'After these things I will return, and I will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen. And I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: that the residue of men may seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who maketh these things known from of old.' (Acts 15:16, 17.)

"While Israel is scattered among the nations of the earth (Deut. 28), God is calling out from among the Gentiles a people for His name (Acts 15:14) who shall compose the church of God. The church is a comparatively small body of mystical origin and destiny. She is not of this earth. They who labor under the delusion that the whole world will be converted and united with the church are totally ignorant of prophecy and the genius of Christianity. The church is a declining moon, soon to vanish from the midnight sky of the current dispensation. (1 Thes. 1:4.) Her light is the reflection of the Sun of Righteousness. Doomed are the Gentile nations of the earth. Great is the destiny of Israel. Vanishing is the true, spiritual and invisible Church of Christ.

" 'I am waiting for the coming
Of the Lord who died for me:
Oh, His words have thrilled my spirit,
"I will come again for thee."
I can almost hear His footfall
On the threshold of the door,
And my heart, my heart is longing
To be His for evermore.' "

Last lecture Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Subject: "Universal Peace." All denominations welcome. Complete series can be secured at office of the Glendale Evening News.

GOSSIP

Josh Billings says: "It's better to know nothin' at all than so much that ain't so."

If people told only what they positively knew to be true, half the gossip in the world would be eliminated. Then if they refrained from telling stories which are true but which are told merely for spite, that would eliminate the rest of the gossip, and God would again be the sole judge of men's souls.

There are no faultless persons on this old earth.

TROPICO

The white-winged messenger, Death, entered the home of Mrs. Wayland Chapman, on El Bonito avenue, on Thursday evening and bore to her eternal home Mrs. Fannie Sutherland, the beloved mother of Mrs. Chapman. Mrs. Sutherland had not been enjoying her usual good health the past six months, but her illness was not regarded as very serious until Monday, the 20th inst., when the patient invalid suffered a collapse. Mrs. Sutherland was a native of Tanyan, N. Y., and was the widow of Albert L. Sutherland, a pioneer of Kansas. Mr. Sutherland was one of the largest and most prominent sheep raisers of Kansas, and in the early days of that state drove many flocks of sheep from New York to Kansas.

About ten years ago Mr. Sutherland passed away at his home in Topeka, and later Mrs. Sutherland removed to California, where she had since resided, dividing her time between her two daughters, Mrs. Wayland Chapman of Tropico and Mrs. J. C. Darnell of Claremont. Mrs. Sutherland at the time of her passing was vice-regent of the Pomona chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Funeral services will be conducted from Scovern-Letton-Frey mortuary Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be in Forest Lawn cemetery.

ACCIDENT PROBLEM'S SOLUTION

The automobile accident problem, which is proving so puzzling to police authorities throughout Southern California, may be solved if the scheme evolved by a police judge in Sacramento to stop speeders is put into effect in Los Angeles and its suburbs. Many speeders come into court, pay their fines and go forth to speed again. The Sacramento judge, J. J. Henderson, has a plan to keep speeders off the highways altogether. In cases where road laws have been violated Judge Henderson asks the state motor vehicle department to suspend the offenders' licenses for periods ranging from ten days to six months. This will deprive them of the use of their machines.

DON'T EXCUSE YOURSELF

In the serious work of living up to our ideals we are prone to excuse ourselves for doing things which even our own conscience tells us is wrong.

You take a stand on a question, meaning to be honest.

Your neighbor's view is opposed to yours.

A controversy arises. In the course of it the fact suddenly dawns on you that your neighbor is right.

But you never swerve from your original stand. You insist you are right, knowing that you are wrong.

Your conscience suggests that you ought to give in and shame your pride.

But you excuse yourself to yourself.

Conscience suggests that you are bull-headed.

You deny it. You insist that you are a person with a "firm character."

In this manner you may fool yourself for years. It is the easiest thing in the world.

But ultimately (and you can greatly hasten the time if you try) you will be able to see your own real faults, and shame will take the place of the old-time excuse.

Then you are beginning to make yourself just exactly like that someone in your neighborhood whom all the neighbors love and trust. He is an honest man whose judgment is well balanced.

THINGS THAT COUNT

What, when our times comes, does it matter whether we have fared daintily or not, whether we have worn soft raiment or not, whether we have a great fortune or nothing at all, whether we shall have reaped honors or been despised, have been counted learned or ignorant, as compared with how we may have used that talent which has been intrusted to us for the Master's service? What shall it matter, when eyeballs glaze and ears grow dull, if out of the darkness may stretch a hand, and into the silence may come a voice: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."—Henry George in "Social Problems."

Children's Bank Accounts

Teaching children the value of money is a very important part of their education.

Thrift does not come at our beck and call, nor can it be slipped on or off like an old coat. It is established by practice rather than theory, by example more than precept.

Girls as well as boys should be encouraged to earn money by real service, and both should early learn what banks are for and how money grows when it is planted in the right soil, so to speak.

THE BANK OF GLENDALE encourages children's accounts and pays the largest rate of interest consistent with good banking.

You can start a savings account with one dollar.

A SILENT WEDDING

William R. Lyons and Mary Henderson, presenting themselves to be married by Court Commissioner Bates of Minneapolis, said not a word; neither did Bates, who sat down at a typewriter and typed the wedding ceremony. Spaces were left for the bride and groom, who filled in their parts of the ceremony. Then Bates wrote at the bottom of the peculiar document, "I pronounce you man and wife." Mr. and Mrs. Lyons are deaf mutes from Fairbault, Minn.

CONGRESSMAN RANDALL'S LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Congressman Randall of California's Ninth district, will introduce into congress at its next session several bills destined to brand the liquor traffic as an outlaw. He has announced five measures in particular for which he will work. Several of these are in line with the legislative program of the united temperance forces of the nation. A majority vote of each house and the president's signature will enact them into law. We hope that this will speedily be secured and we confidently expect that at least part of the program will be put into operation by congress at its next session.

Mr. Randall says his five measures may be briefly summarized as follows:

1. Prohibit indiscriminate issuance of federal licenses.
2. Prohibit the use of the United States mails for advertising liquors.
3. Prohibit the use of interstate commerce in shipment of liquors and importation from foreign countries.
4. Prohibit transformation of food products, grain or fruits, into intoxicating liquors.
5. Prohibit appointment or employment in United States civil service of any person who uses intoxicating liquors.

A man in Brazil has asked the commerce department where he can buy 85,000 razor blades. We'd like to see his whiskers.

CONTEST ENDS DISASTROUSLY

The Odd Fellows who did not attend the meeting last night missed a good time. After the regular lodge work, for the good of the order several of the brothers told stories and gave talks on the San Diego fair. Later all retired to the banquet room, where a most refreshing sight met the eye—large and luscious watermelons hung on the vines and were piled up, fresh and cool. When all had assembled a speed contest was put on. The Noble Grand and the W. supporter to the Vice-Grand bared themselves to the waist. Next the doctor felt their pulses to see if it was safe for them to proceed, while the goat, newly manicured by Brother Lund and in a new pair of shoes, stood near to act as judge and eat the rinds. All went well for a time, but the goat became unmanageable because the boys were too slow and didn't furnish rind fast enough to keep his highness occupied. Brother Norton and Brother Fish fell on the goat and it looked for a time as if the goat would win, but Brother Lund slipped out and got a pair of brass knobs, which he clapped on his horns. Brother Ingledue placed a pair of hobbles on his forefeet. All this excitement made the contestants rather nervous, and Brother Noble Grand began to cough and sneeze and his opponent was crying for salt so he could eat more, and faster. The doctor saw something was wrong, stepped up and felt Brother Noble Grand's pulse and found that the Noble Grand was trying to cheat the goat by eating rind and all.

To make a long story short, all enjoyed the evening very much and departed saying, "Good night; pleasant dreams; come again."

SINK HORSE TRANSPORT

(Special Service to Evening News.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 24.—United States Consul Frost, stationed at Queenstown, Ireland, reported today that a German submarine had sunk a British horse transport after chasing it 78 miles. The crew, among whom were five Americans, was given time to escape.

WASHINGTON WIG-WAGS

A Netherlander has written the department of commerce for the address of whoever makes "a handy folding egg boiler." We would like to glimpse the folding egg he's going to boil.

Same Netherlander wants "a perfect noodle cutter." We fear he is doomed to disappointment in this, as perfect noodle cutters have for the most part given way to the hangman and the electric chair.

Since the commerce department has so lamented the lack of potash we are reminded that there hasn't been much perlmutter noticeable lately, either.

CLOTHING THE ARMY

Some idea of the number of soldiers England has equipped or now is equipping may be gained by a survey of the work of the great British textile districts, which shows that khaki to equip 200,000 men weekly is now being produced.

Two hundred miles of this yellow material, 56 inches wide, are woven and dyed every seven days throughout the network of industries centered in Leeds and in other Yorkshire cities. Government contract tailors on the various scenes are not far behind the mills in putting the cloth into uniforms.

For the past three months the difficult government problem of producing enough khaki to garb the latest recruits has been solved. The textile mills are still turning out their weekly quota and have not yet received a "slow-down" order from the war office.

From Manchester comes the huge quantities of cotton thread, lining and trimming materials for the soldier's uniform. Birmingham furnishes carloads of buttons, buckles and other metal pieces.

The number of persons engaged in this work is a small army in itself.

WAR ODDITIES 4

One result of the submarine war is that Grimsby, a British east coast fishing city, has been obliged to import fish, the Grimsby trawlers feeling safer in port.

Because of the necessity for Sunday harvest work, due to scarcity of labor on account of war, the rector of Thornham Magna, Suffolk, first conducts brief Sunday services in the fields and then lends a hand to the work.

A mother at Sudbury, Norfolk, has learned of the death of her two soldier sons in Northern France, killed by the same shell.

One of the pontoons with which the Turks made their famous attempt to cross the Suez canal is now doing duty as an ornament in a Manchester park.

Lord Kitchener has advised British medical students now in their fourth or fifth year not to join the army, but to finish their medical education in order to qualify as soon as possible.

Peasant wood carvers of Switzerland have turned their industry almost completely into the manufacture of artificial limbs for mutilated soldiers.

SCRAMBLE FOR SCHOOL LANDS

It is expected that there will be a big scramble for school lands in San Bernardino county following the issuance of pamphlets by W. S. Kingsbury, state surveyor-general, showing the exact location of each piece of property by section, township and range. These pamphlets are being distributed throughout the state. They show that San Bernardino county has the greatest acreage of vacant school lands. There are vast domains ready to be occupied in many other counties, however. All parcels for sale by the state are described in the pamphlets.

The Pharisee's prayer is too much in vogue today.

WORD TO MOTHERS

Mothers of small children need to take special precautions in the early fall. Tho Woman's Home Companion gives these suggestions for September:

Keep your baby away from sick people and out of crowds.

Do not let people kiss your baby on lips or cheeks.

A baby needs exercise, so do not keep your little one tied in his chair or go-cart too much. Creeping is excellent for developing the muscles.

Do not try to teach your baby to stand. A healthy baby will stand and walk when strong enough to do so.

Never give your baby "tastes" of your own food. It is very dangerous. If he is old enough to have solid food he should be on a regular diet adapted to his age.

Dress your baby according to the temperature, not merely according to the season of the year.

Remember that September nights are often chilly, even though the days may be hot; see that your baby does not sleep in a draft. Keep the windows open wide, but put a screen around his bed.

Go and see the school where you send your children, and satisfy yourself that it is sanitary, properly heated, lighted and ventilated, and not overcrowded.

Give each child who goes to school a pretty folding drinking cup, or a supply of individual paper cups.

WILSON KEEPS TO SELF

Through sweltering days of international crises (the word is stale in Washington) President Wilson again has demonstrated his marvelous ability to sit tight and think through to a decision without seeing advisers and without a furry in White House routine. So far as visible signs go, President Wilson in these perilous days might be a quiet scholar leading a singularly uneventful and retired life in the big, homey old mansion among the trees.

During the most critical days of the Arabic - Hesperian - Dumba incidents he saw Secretary of State Lansing for a brief 40 minutes, ate luncheon at his own table with Son-in-law McAdoo once, and in the course of a week received formal calls lasting 15 minutes from not a half dozen others, all persons of no importance, to whom international affairs are Greek. Not once did the president sit across the table from an official or personal adviser and enjoy one of those loose and informal discussions that average citizens crave when confronted by problems infinitely less absorbing and momentous. One afternoon he sat through a ball game with the rotund form of Secretary of the Interior Lane beside him, but the president's shaking shoulders showed that their conversation led far away from submarines and diplomatic conspiracies.

All that policemen on the White House lawn and White House correspondents saw during these days was the leisurely White House routine of golfing in the morning and motoring in the afternoon. At the executive offices assistant secretaries read newspapers and talked tennis or baseball. The appointment book was nearly blank. This does not mean that President Wilson hasn't his finger on the pulse of the nation. He has imagination, for one thing, and it is declared it is just because he wants to listen to the voice of all the people that he refuses to listen to a handful who may or may not represent ninety millions.

The president has resumed theater-death of Mrs. Wilson. In his first going for the first time since the week he saw a stock company in one of the old popular favorites and a vaudeville show. There is nothing high-brow in his pleasures. No gum-chewing girl with her "steady" beside her could be more appreciative when a slap-stick "artist" falls into the footlight trough or reaches over and gives the orchestra leader a resounding smack. Dr. Cary Grayson, White House physician on special detail from the navy, is the president's constant companion at golf, motoring and the theater. Dr. Grayson has a reputation as a good story teller, and at the White House he gets lots of practice. The president loves a good story and laughs like a boy.

Washington doesn't like the president's seclusion. It likes the searchlight on the Washington monument at night and the Marine band. It likes fuss and feathers, and it likes White House occupants who are good subjects for endless anecdotes. But even to Washington the thought occurs that perhaps the president is giving too much to the country partly because he gives so little to Washington. The presidency is such a big job these days that the man who fills it must neglect a few little details like supplying Washington with subjects for social gossip and giving the glad hand to a stream of leading citizens from Spoon River, Silver Springs and way points.

THE NEW COLLARS

New high collars on some attractive Paris blouses are made from transparent plisse frills higher at the side and back. The waists open in deep V-shape in front and the collar, which stops at each side of the throat, is held in place by a ribbon neck band, either of velvet or silk. The ribbon passes all round the throat.

Some of the new frocks show standing "choker" collars built on the dress. These are open in front. Inside are worn standing band collars of stiff linen, with cuffs to match.

It's a dull day when there is not a new slide in the Panama canal.

Through the generations to come he will be known as Goethals, the canal builder.

It is possible to be a patriot and keep still about it. Genuine patriotism needs no brass-band heralding.

Modern thinking may have eliminated the sulphur and brimstone from future punishment, but the torment is still uneradicated. There are some things as dreadful as literal burning in a lake of real fire.

FLOWERS FOR SPRING

Crocus, Narcissus, Tulips and Spanish Iris Must Be Planted Early

Garden lovers who wish their gardens, or the grounds around their houses to be rich in spring with crocus, narcissus, tulips and Spanish iris, should begin their work without delay, for fall is the time to plant the bulbs of these flowers. The work should be undertaken as soon as early frost has injured the foliage in the beds of annual flowers, for, while the bulbs will succeed if planted as late as November in the latitude of Washington, they are much better planted earlier, and in the northern states will not succeed when planted later than October.

In the case of crocus, many will find it desirable to establish the plants so that they grow and blossom on the lawn much as wild flowers do, or they may be mixed with other bulbs in the border where they will be one of the earliest flowers to appear in the spring and will have disappeared before the narcissus begin to bloom. The list of varieties of the latter often known as daffodils or jonquils, is almost bewildering and some of the more vigorous growing kinds may also be established in the lawn in a more or less natural state. Many of the varieties, however, that succeed in this way in England, where the flower is exceedingly popular, will not do so well in this country, except in the southern states and on the Pacific coast. Perhaps the best for this purpose are the Poeticus varieties, which are certain to be hardy. They should never be planted in the lawn in rows or geometric figures. An easy method of giving them a naturalized appearance is to scatter the bulbs as if one were sowing seed, and then plant them where they happen to fall. This should be done only where it is desired to leave the lawn in a wild condition, for the grass can not be cut until the foliage begins to die, which will be a few weeks after the appearance of the flowers. In many of the parks of the large estate s of England, in portions of North Carolina, on estates along the James river in Virginia and even in old New England gardens, narcissus that was planted many years ago is still vigorous and produces every spring a beautiful display of blossoms.

Tulips may also be obtained in many varieties and by making the proper selection they will give a succession of bloom for several weeks. No attempt should be made to utilize them except in the border on the formal bed.

Coming after all except the latest tulips, is the Spanish iris, and though one of the most attractive for the border it is one of the cheapest of bulbs, often being called "the poor man's orchid." To be most effective they should be planted in groups or masses of the same kind.

All of these bulbs will do well in moderately rich loam that is well drained, but they will often succeed very well in less favorable conditions. If they are to be planted in the border or in beds the soil should be worked deep, but no manure should come in contact with the narcussus, crocus or Spanish iris, though well-rolled manure may be worked into the soil where tulips are to be planted.

The depths at which bulbs be planted varies with the soil, light soil requiring deeper planting than heavy, and with the size of the bulb. As a rule crocus may be planted three inches and Spanish iris four inches deep. Narcissus have from four to five inches of soil above the bulb and should be five to six inches distant from each other. Tulips should be four inches below the surface and six inches apart each way.
